

ENGLISH MINOR

Mission

The English Department's mission is to inspire careful and reflective readers; train nuanced and complex thinkers; and guide clear, creative, and compelling writers. Together, we aim to appreciate the beauty and power of language, attune ourselves to the complexity of narrative worlds, and glorify God through educating ourselves and others about how language shapes our world.

Overview

As an English minor (<https://www.biola.edu/degrees/u/english-minor/>) at Biola, you'll join a community of students and faculty dedicated to the pursuit of nuanced thought, careful reading, and creative, persuasive writing. The English Department engages in community, together, by practicing the power of language and story. Whether you're majoring in Business or Biology, adding an English minor to your studies will help you prepare to pursue and embody the greatest story — the gospel — in your home, city, church and career.

Curriculum Requirements

An English Minor is offered upon the completion of 18 credits, 3 of which must be completed via ENGL 190, and 9 of which must be upper-division. The 3 credits of 200-level Core Literature or ENGL 313 required of all Biola students may count toward the minor.
